PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

February 2019

I hope that all of our members are well and enjoying the new year. The San Marino Historical Society has had an eventful fall and winter. At our October program, Bill Warren presented an excellent program to a full house on the Grand Hotels of the San Gabriel Valley. We are grateful to Bill for his contribution to our society that evening.

The docents continue to provide visitors and groups with tours of the Thurnher House at Lacy Park on Sundays. We encourage all of our membership and others to visit. We plan to enhance and increase the tour experience with the recent acquisition of a new display panel fixture that will allow us to show our guests more historical photos, maps and images from our collections. Archivist Judy Carter and the volunteers continue working on many projects and keep the Thurnher House open every Tuesday.

For the winter program, our society will provide you with what should be another interesting program on Monday, February 25th. The speaker will be Jeff Lapidés and his presentation "Passage to Eldorado" will feature the earliest photographs of the American Desert West by Rudolph d'Heureuse during his journey from Los Angeles to the Colorado River and the mines in Nevada in 1863.

The Thurnher House at Lacy Park is open to visitors for tours from noon until 3:00 PM on the first and third Sunday of every month and by appointment on Tuesdays. This is the former Park Superintendent's home and the docents look forward to having visitors.

If any member is interested in volunteering with our organization, please contact us at 626-304-9375 or info@sanmarinohistoricalsociety.org

At the January board meeting, Isaac Hung was elected President of the San Marino Historical Society. We look forward to his leadership and appreciate his commitment to this organization. I will continue to be active as Past President and as a Docent at the Thurnher House. It has been a pleasure to lead our society for the past three years.

I hope to see many of you at our next program or at the Thurnher House.

John Ryan
President

On Monday, February 25, the San Marino Historical Society welcomes Jeff Lapidés who will speak on Rudolph d'Heureuse, a naturalized German immigrant, who photographed the early American west and its deserts in 1863. Jeff will share this fascinating story and the scenes d'Heureuse captured in his photographs. Lapidés has spoken to the Los Angeles Corral of Westerners and other local history groups. He is the founder of First Water Designs and in that capacity designed San Marino: A Centennial History for the San Marino Historical Society. (see page 2 for more information on this program). Passage to El Dorado

A German immigrant with a camera, Rudolph d'Heureuse—surveyor, cartographer, civil engineer, mining engineer, oenologist, inventor set out on a momentous journey in 1863. He photographed the Mojave Road in the desert from the waters of the Pacific Ocean to the banks of the Colorado River and the mines of Eldorado Canyon in today's Nevada. His subjects included San Bernardino, Cajon Pass, and Los Angeles's seaport, New San Pedro (Wilmington) to Fort Mojave on the Colorado River. He did it in 1863, many years before anyone else took the next photo of the desert, its environs, miners, travelers, forts, soldiers, watering holes, and crossroads.

During this presentation, Jeff Lapiques will tell of d'Heureuse's world of 1863—newly arrived, hopeful miners; the locals comprised of Californios, Mexican-Americans and Native Americans; Mormons; and Union soldiers including the California Volunteers.

Jeff is a photographer and a book designer. He designed San Marino: A Centennial History which won several local, state, national and international design awards. Jeff is actively involved in the history communities in the San Gabriel Valley. He specializes in the preservation and promotion of history.

Copies of a companion book, The Mojave Road In 1863: The Pioneering Photographs of Rudolph d'Heureuse, will be available for sale after the lecture.

A Bequest to the San Marino Historical Society from Oskar Thurnher

Oskar Thurnher passed away on March 29, 2018 and the San Marino Historical Society was named as a beneficiary of his estate. On December 2, 2018, we received a letter and a generous check from his son Erik, the trustee of the estate, informing the San Marino Historical Society of Thurnher's wishes that the funds be used to help support the society's efforts in the years ahead.

Erik stated, "Having grown up in San Marino, Oskar felt a deep sense of connection with the City and Environs. During his retirement years, he took a great measure of satisfaction and pleasure from his involvement with the activities of the San Marino Historical Society. The relationships he formed with the volunteers of the Society were the basis of several lasting friendships that he valued deeply. He was also very grateful for the role the Society played in helping to record the history of the Thurnher family in San Marino, and its efforts to preserve the family home in Lacy Park. The ability to return "home" and visit with so many friends who shared his love of the city and its history was a source of joy for him until the end of his life."

Archivist Judith Carter stated recently, "We are grateful to Oskar for his support over the years and for his generosity through his trust. We will announce how the funds will be used in coming months."

More on the Nixon in San Marino Story

After an article was published in the Fall 2018 Grapevine, people began contacting us with information on Richard Nixon's political career and its relationship to San Marino. Jackie Flynn donated a copy of "How Richard Nixon Started his Political Career, San Marino 1945". She has also offered additional material from her family's collection. We will report on the material once it is incorporated into the archives.

Former San Marino Historical Society President Jeanne Imler remembers meeting Richard Nixon at an annual picnic supper of the San Marino Republican Women's Club at Lacy Park on September 18, 1962 when Nixon was running for Governor of California. She stated, "I attended the annual picnic supper where Nixon was present. He signed my ticket to the picnic and I still have his autograph!"

We encourage contributions from our members and the community at large on a broad range of topics that will strengthen the collection.

Deborah Kitson Smith's Family Remembers her with a Gift to the San Marino Historical Society

Deborah Smith's ties to San Marino were deep. Born in Berkeley, California in 1924, Deborah lived in San Marino from 1956 to 2015. She raised her three children, Boyd, Kitsy and David, in their home on Roanoke Road. In the mid 1960s, Deborah began working at the Huntington Library and remained there for twenty-five years, reporting to two presidents, Drs. Thorpe and Skotheim. Each of her children worked at the Huntington as well. In addition to her dedication to the Huntington Deborah was an active member in the PEO Chapter DG. She passed away in 2017 in San Francisco after moving to be near her daughter.

After her death her family sought a way to commemorate her life in San Marino. They recently donated a display system to the San Marino Historical Society. The forty panel display system will allow the Historical Society to present a broad sweep of the history of the city from the time before incorporation to the present. A formal dedication will take place which each of the panels is complete.

President John Ryan who conducts docent tours of the Thurnher House stated, "The generosity of the Smith family will allow us to more properly inform visitors about the span of the history of San Marino."

San Marino Historical Resources Survey

The San Marino City Council voted to have a survey of the city's historical resources completed by an outside firm, Architectural Resources Group (ARC). The firm has completed a number of surveys for cities in the greater Los Angeles area. Mary Ringhoff of ARC made the initial presentation to the City Council on Wednesday, January 8.

Prior to that meeting, Aldo Cervantes City of San Marino Planning and Building Director and Mary Ringhoff met with San Marino Historical Society Archivist Judith Carter to review the resources in the archives that would be available to Mary and her team in conducting the survey.

The plan outlined by Architectural Resource Group is made up of a two phases. The first is the Identification Phase which includes research, a historic context statement and a reconnaissance survey. This will lead to a refined list of potential historic resources and a draft historic context statement. This first phase is slated to be completed by June 2019.

Phase 2 will begin after that date with the schedule to be determined at that time. The final survey report and a list of potential historic resources in San Marino will be presented to the council.

All during the periods encompassing both phases of the process, public input will be important to ARC. There will be public workshops and meetings at which findings will be reviewed. San Marino Historical Society members are encouraged to participate in the process.

The purpose of the survey is as follows:

- Inform planning decisions and provide baseline information for City planners
- Establish priorities for preservation, restoration and rehabilitation efforts
- Strengthen appreciation for the built environment
- Facilitate CEQA review.

This plan will complete a process to address the need for a complete list of historically significant buildings in the city attempted by the Historical Society in the early 1990s. A later city committee to consider drafting a historical structures ordinance was formed but did not lead to any formal conclusions.
